Routing number

A diagram of a check number field. It shows a rectangular box containing a check number. The check number is divided into three parts: a routing number, an account number, and a check number. The routing number is the first part, the account number is the second part, and the check number is the third part. The check number is circled. Labels with arrows point to each part: 'Routing number' points to the first part, 'Account number' points to the second part, and 'Check number' points to the circled third part.
